Michael is 49 years old, a dedicated husband, a devoted father of two and serial entrepreneur. The past 10 years have proven to be an incredible journey of faith for Michael. From being in Manhattan on 9/11/2001, to a life threatening medical situation with a long and difficult physical, emotional and financial recovery - Michael's is a dramatic story of God's faithfulness, the power of prayer, and a living example that there is hope no matter how dire the circumstances may appear.

Professionally, Halloran directs the operations of NES Financial, a financial services organization that provides increased security and transparency on over $20 billion of complex multi-party trusts and escrows annually. NES Financial includes operating subsidiary Nationwide Exchange Services (NES), the nation's largest provider of 1031 tax-deferred exchange services and a leading partner to major US Banks. In 2008, Michael led NES through the acquisition of JPMorgan Property Exchange (JPEX) from JPMorgan Chase to make NES the unquestioned market leader in all major commercial sectors of 1031 exchanges and the number one provider of 1031 exchange services to the Fortune 500. Michael is a frequent speaker in commercial real estate, equipment leasing and banking industry events, and a leading voice on Capitol Hill advocating strict consumer protections and federal oversight of unregulated sectors within the financial services industry. Michael has testified before the U.S. Congress, has worked with both the U.S. House and Senate to draft legislation, and has worked with government organizations such as the FDIC and the IRS on issues of security, transparency, and consumer protection.
